CityCenter Danbury's Architectural Advisory Committee seeks new members

DANBURY, CT — The Architectural Advisory Committee for CityCenter Danbury has three open positions for volunteers who will help beautify Main Street and surrounding areas. Committee members review signage and architectural design of all buildings and facades and other structures to ensure that they fit harmoniously within the downtown. AAC members are engineers, designers, architects and professionals with similar backgrounds; members live or work in Danbury.

“The committee makes recommendations based on architectural theme, community compatibility, aesthetics and exterior materials,” AAC President and Architect Leigh Overland said. “We work with business owners to help them attract as many customers as possible. We have assisted many entrepreneurs with critiques that they were able to incorporate into their designs.”

The appointment is for a one-year term. The committee meets twice a month at CityCenter offices or over Zoom, as long as there are applications to discuss. Residents and/or local professionals who would like to join the committee should send a letter of interest and resume to CityCenter, 268 Main St., or email the materials to info@citycenterdanbury.com with “AAC Volunteer Opportunity” in the subject line.

The CityCenter Danbury Board of Commissioners appoints members of the Architectural Advisory Committee, which the city established in 1995. The committee makes recommendations to the City of Danbury Director of Planning, who has final approval.
